National web

- the national web as a whole is an important part of a nation's cultural heritage and can be studied in its own right
- it is a back cloth for all other types of web entities and activities
- it can identify some of the patterns of the developments of the web and relate them to the web of today

National archives are biased and messy

- Not everything has been archived
- Archiving strategies changes over time
- Unsystematic, no register, no original to compare with
